PRICE SEVEN CENTS

Victim Of Flying RR Brake Critical

Face Hit By 20 lb. Object

Twenty-year-old Pat McLaughlin remains in "very critical" condition at Lower Bucks County Hospital—the entire left side of her face torn away.

It all happened so suddenly yesterday afternoon while Pat and four other Croydon women were driving to their jobs at the Atlantic Tea Packing Company in Bristol.

The time was 3:15 p.m. The five women, with Barbara Sharkey, 19, of 1030 Third Ave., Croydon at the wheel, were heading toward Bristol on Route 13, near the intersection of Route 413.

All work the 3:30 p.m. to midnight shift at the plant.

Speeding Train

Speeding by them at the time was the Pennsylvania Railroad's Boston to Washington express, The Colonial, heading south.

Suddenly the front windshield gave way as part of a 20-pound brake shoe from one of the railroad cars whirled through the air with lightning speed and went clear through the rear window.

"It was terrible," Miss Sharkey, the driver of the car said this morning. "Pat, who was sitting next to me fell on my shoulder and I felt the blood from her face on my dress."

Good Evening!

S.O. Battling For G.G.G.

About midnight it sounded as though Lower Bucks was under bombardment.

The thunder was as loud as a 16-inch gun going off in your ear. It was welcome though since it brought the needed rain. The lawns showed immediate improvement this morning.

Here's hoping though the rain stops before the weekend.

Three N.J. state troopers are killed in a turnpike crash as a bus topples on their police car.

A terrible accident. The N.J. state police will probably be out in force the next few months slowing down some of the speeding buses.

Three princes of Laos seem to have the situation worked out.

Three kings is a pretty good hand but whether three princes will stand up nobody seems to know.

Another place where things may work out may be Algeria. Reports are that the Moslems and Europeans are on the verge of compromise.

That would be a big step toward world peace.

John Welsh makes a comeback.

Whether the Democrats can now heal the breach is still waiting to be seen. Of course the Republicans are in the same boat so it may even the votes out.

Talking about world peace the Yankees were in another fight last night. That's the New York Yankee team of course.

Strangest part about the fight is that it was precipitated by a bean ball thrown by none other than Robin Roberts. Maybe the bean balls help because Robbie won the game and took it from the team that never let him throw a ball in anger.

"I believe in the two party system," declared a Broadwayite, "but not if they're both on the same night."

When it comes to getting the news around, the female is more dependable than the mail.

Be careful.

Result Shocks Mulligan

By SCOOP LEWIS
Courier-Times Staff Writer

The lights didn't go out last night for John T. Welsh.

The former Bucks County commissioner staged a stunning, and in some quarters, a surprising comeback victory over John C. Mulligan for the leadership of the county Democratic party.

Welsh won the two-year term as party chairman by a 179 to 159 vote over Chairman Mulligan at last night's biennial meeting of the 338 county committeemen and women.

4½ Hour Session

While last night's 4½-hour session was waxed with the heat of battle which had built up the past 16 months, it was a victory "I had expected." For Mulligan, 52-year-old Bristol Township resident seeking his third term as county chairman, last night's result came as a shock.

Both Claimed Victory

Both Welsh, former county chairman, and Mulligan, before last night's voting had predicted victory, each claiming over 200 votes.

Welsh, chairman of the State Workmen's Compensation Board, was undisputed leader in Bucks County for 14 years, until he and Mulligan disagreed in February, 1961, over the county slate for last fall's election.

The Democrats last night turned out the man Welsh picked for the job four years ago, Mulligan is a referee for the State Workmen's Compensation Board.

Welsh today disclosed he has no immediate plans in the Democratic party's structure.

He praised his victorious slate of six officers and expressed the desire that "all Democrats will (Continued on Page 3, Col. 4)

Showers End Eight-Week Dry Period

Early morning showers and thundershowers today brought relief to Lower Bucks County's parched farmlands and sun-baked lawns and ended threats of water shortage in certain areas.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Trenton reported 1.48 inches of rain fell between midnight and 8 a.m.

Other areas in Pennsylvania and New Jersey weren't as fortunate as Lower Bucks. Allentown reported less than a half inch while Philadelphia reported 1.47 inches.

Ends Dry Period

The showers brought relief from an eight-week dry period which had approached drought conditions. Since mid-April Lower Bucks had received only 40 per cent of its normal rainfall. However, the early-morning showers brought the seasonal average up to normal with over 17 inches of rain thus far this year.

Today's forecast calls for occasional light showers with temperatures in the 70s. The skies are expected to clear tonight with tomorrow's outlook mostly sunny and pleasant. Low humidity is on tap for tomorrow with the temperature between 75-80. Yesterday's high of 85 degrees was recorded at 6 p.m.

Algiers Holds Peace Talks

ALGIERS (UPI) — Moslem nationalists and Algeria's Europeans appeared today to be near a compromise which could end six months of violence and set a pattern for future cooperation in an independent Algeria.

Top-level talks have been going on for some time at the heavily guarded administrative headquarters at Rocher Noir. The negotiations involve Europeans and members of the provisional executive which is ruling Algeria until independence.

Convention Air Prevails Election, Weather Both Plenty Hot

The heat of battle in last night's county Democratic election was hot, but not quite as hot as the temperature inside the overcrowded Tyro Hall.

Outside the mercury stood at a comfortable 78 degrees. Inside the walls were virtually bulging and the temperature felt like it was hitting the century mark. Probably the luckiest persons were the ones who arrived late and couldn't get into the packed hall. At least it was cooler standing on the outside.

Political convention air prevailed in Buckingham as 338 Democratic committeemen and women poured in from all over Bucks. Many were carrying placards and signs. All wore badges signifying their support.

One sign read: "Let's Scratch Race Track John Welsh." Another said: "Welsh Can't Brain Wash Me . . . I Think For Myself . . . I'm For Mulligan."

But the signs didn't do the trick as the final results showed.

Last night's meeting, lasting 4½ hours, was hot and noisy, but it was orderly from start to finish. Boos and catcalls were common though throughout the nominations.

Middletown Township Supervisor Walter Farley drew a mixture of boos, laughs and catcalls when he nominated Walter Almond of Falls Township for vice chairman. Similar reaction greeted Norvin Nathan when he put Dave Clarke's name up for treasurer. Both (Continued on Page 3, Col. 4)

185 Graduate At St. Michael's

The largest elementary school in Lower Bucks County, St. Michael the Archangel of Levittown, this morning graduated 185 members of its charter class.

Graduation ceremonies and a graduation Mass were held in the school chapel with the Rev. Father Joseph Collins, rector of St. Michael's, as the speaker. Eighteen of the students were singled out for honors.

Of the 185 graduated, all but about 10 entered the first grade at St. Michael's when the school opened in the fall of 1964. Thus it is the first class to complete all eight grades at the school.

Changes Due Shortly For National Tube

Steps which may have a definite bearing on the future of the Fairless Works plant of the U.S. Steel National Tube Division are expected to be taken soon, a company spokesman said this morning.

"The demand for the product at the Fairless Works plant has fallen off considerably," the spokesman said, "and the management of the tube division is studying the situation."

Tide Of Concern

The report was made to clarify a tide of concern by employees at the Fairless plant that the plant was to be sold. The tube division of the Fairless Works plant employs 500.

The spokesman emphasized that only the tube division of the Fairless plant is involved in the study. He added that reports that the (Continued on Page 3, Col. 2)

Three Convicts Flee Alcatraz Prison

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Three bank robbers escaped from Alcatraz prison and law enforcement agencies today began a massive land, sea and air search of San Francisco Bay and its shoreline.

Acting Warden Arthur Dollison said the inmates presumably fled the island prison Monday night on an improvised raft or piece of driftwood in an attempt to reach nearby Angel Island or the mainland.

The missing men were identified as John William Anglin, 32, and his brother, Clarence, 28, and Farris Egbert Morris. It was not immediately known whether they were armed.

Dollison said the men fled by removing a portion of the backs of their cells with a spoon, which admitted them to the utilities area pipe tunnel.

"They then climbed to the roof and removed or sawed a bar protecting a skylight and from there went down a pipe to the rear of (Continued on Page 3, Col. 2)

Editor Finds Standard Of Living Mounting

Yankee $$s, Know-How Boon To Italy

By GEORGE G. GRAY
Editor, Courier-Times
(Seventh in a series)

ROME — (Delayed) — Italy is an excellent example of how principal nations are prospering as members of the European Economic Community (the Common Market) created and energized by the treaty of Rome in 1957.

Before World War II this nation was consuming only 2,500,000 tons of steel annually. In 1961 the consumption soared to 11,000,000 tons. By 1965 the figure is expected to be in excess of 15,000,000 tons.

The Italian economy is not precisely exploding. But thanks to United States dollars as well as our technological know-how of which Italy is taking full advantage, there is a surprising increase in industrial development, a much brighter social climate and a steadily mounting standard of living.

This is not all due to the Common Market as such. Much of it started under Marshall Plan auspices after the war. But Common Market safeguards which protect Italy's trading position and therefore stabilize her economy serve as a promising guide line for the future.

Professor Mario Marchesi, representing the Italian steel and coal industries in the EEC, made it clear that expansion of these industries fits perfectly into the programs and the goals of the European Community.

He was quite frank in stating

Italy has the U. S. to thank for a renaissance of the steel industry, practically destroyed during the war, and that American influence is still a major factor in continuing expansion.

The industry has been beneficiary of extended loans and credits. Many American technicians are constantly on the job here. Italy sends several hundred of its own technicians to America each year for training.

Moreover, since Italy has no iron ore or coal deposits of any significance, she must import these raw products from across the world to keep her steel mills operating. Last year 75 per cent of her coking coal came from the United States, most of it reportedly from the U. S. Steel Corporation, and most of her iron ore—again, reportedly from U. S. Steel. He didn't say it in so many words but Marchesi's implication was that U. S. Steel had a generous slice of interest in the Italian steel industry — about 50 per cent.

There is no question anywhere here about Europe being on the economic march under the Common Market flag.

What a quarter of a century ago would have been impossible in gradual removal of the many artificial and strangulating trade barriers, has become reality in four short years.

Already tariffs and duties have been reduced in many instances as much as 50 per cent among Common Market nations — Italy, (Continued on Page 3, Col. 1)

A Boon To Italy

France, Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands. The Market program embraces not only the industrial economy of these nations but the agricultural sectors as well. It is expected that trade will be completely free in the next four years.
In addition, there is a harmonizing of prices. Not price-fixing as we know it in America, but rather, price-listing with the EEC Commission.
This price-listing represents merely a ceiling and a floor as a basis of trade among EEC members and, according to knowledgeable people it has not had the effect of curtailing competition but, rather, of encouraging it.
At the same time, Common Market membership doesn't mean a member nation is not perfectly free to join in world trade which all of them do. In this connection, Italy imports coal from the United States at $3 less per ton than she can buy it in Germany. This has become a worry-some problem for Bonn because, despite the dynamism of the Ruhr and the Saar, inefficiency and lack of mechanization is a real mining problem.
Despite remarkable progress of the past few years, Italy's economy still has a long way to go. While her utilities, railroads, communication systems and many industries are nationalized, there is no long-range economic develop-

Woman Held
In Slaying
Of Girl

TOMS RIVER, N.J., UPI — A woman drama instructor who had accompanied a red-haired Pennsylvania girl to the Jersey shore was arrested today as a material witness in her slaying.
Rose Schulman, 52, of Media, Pa. was arrested and arraigned here before Ocean County Judge Robert Novins. She was released under $2,000 bail.
State police awaited the results of a second autopsy on the body of Phyllis Ann Jones, 22, of Berkeley Road, Rose Valley Pa., the daughter of a Norristown, Pa. store manager, whose body was found Saturday.
An autopsy yesterday indicated that the red-haired dramatics student had been severely beaten about the face.
Police said that the girl's wrists were tied behind her with the halter strap from her two-piece bathing suit, but that she had not been sexually assaulted.
One of the nation's leading pathologists, Dr. Milton Halpern of New York City, performed a second autopsy to determine the precise cause of death and the method or instrument used to administer the beating.
Dr. Halpern finished the autopsy early today and ordered tests on laboratory specimens. He said it would be two or three days before the results were known.
The girl's father told police she left the Hedgerow Theater near Media, Pa., early Saturday with Rose Schulman, 52, director of the theater's dramatic school. They drove to the Jersey shore in Miss Jones' station wagon.
The victim went for a walk along the beach late Saturday while Miss Schulman visited with a friend, Mrs. Dorothy Walnut, who runs an art shop at Barnegat Light. When Miss Jones did not return from her walk, Miss Schulman assumed that the young drama student had met friends and had decided to stay the night. Miss Schulman took a bus back to Pennsylvania.
Mrs. Walnut's husband called police Sunday when he saw Miss Jones' car still parked on the beach.
Detective Bart Vought said there were no indications of a struggle near the pit, opening the possibility Phyllis was killed elsewhere.

join in and close the ranks for the forthcoming fight in November. The only way we can go is up," he said.
Joining Welsh on his all-victorious slate were John Mayes of Perkies Borough, Mrs. Mary McGee of Crofton and Mrs. Myrtle Gallen, Warrington, vice chairmen; Jack Sirott, Levittown, treasurer; Harold V. Carven of Richboro, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Kitty Afflerbach, recording secretary.
"I'll give them (Mulligan's forces) a few days to clear out of headquarters," Welsh remarked.
"Expected to Win"
Welsh, who was county commissioner from 1952-60, said that last night's victory brought to an end the rule of a "small group of scoundrels who had taken over the party during Mulligan's four years."
Moments after his victory was announced to the overflow throng in Tyro Hall of the Grange Building at Buckingham at 1 a.m. today, Welsh said, "I expected to win."
He felt that "everybody had a fair chance and the majority has spoken."
See Victory In November
Mulligan, while showing signs of bitter disappointment at the stunning defeat, called upon his followers to "be the great Democrats you are and go right down the organization line 100 per cent. This slate, I predict, will be victorious in November."
Mulligan told the committee workers, "I think I put on the fairest election you've ever seen." He was referring to the fact that the meeting was chaired by Sen. Fred Rooney of Northampton County, who is also Democratic city chairman of Bethlehem.
Gerald W. Ullman of Reading, an assistant state attorney general, was on hand to observe the proceedings for state Democratic headquarters. Following the outcome, Ullman remarked, "It was excellent and it was fair."
"Crossed His Hand"
Mulligan, before the meeting, announced that an "impartial chairman" would preside at the meeting and that there would be a state observer in attendance. Welsh, however, today declared, "we crossed his (Mulligan) hand. The telegram we sent Gov. Lawrence and the work of Jim Michener and Bob Valmont did it."
Michener, Democratic candidate for Congress, and Valmont, candidate for State Senate, were both on hand last night.
There was one man who couldn't be a loser last night. He was Mayes, who ran on both tickets. Vice chairman of the party for the past 14 years, Mayes was reelected last night, polling 327 votes out of a possible 338.

Democrats weren't the only ones in Buckingham last night. The Loyal Republican Club of Buckingham was in session in another building, 50 yards behind where the Democrats were sizzling. Such GOP notables as Assemblyman Alan Williams and Bill Lindeberg stopped over to catch glimpses of the Democratic proceedings.
The Democrats even enjoyed Republican refreshments, sauntering over to the cooler GOP meeting for the foamy stuff.
There was many a disappointed Democrat trudging out of the Grange Hall early this morning, including Oscar Booz, Bristol Township party leader, who long has been an avowed, outspoken foe of Welsh.
Among the more happier was Bill O'Neill, former Bristol Township commissioner, who many credited with "executing" last night's Welsh victory.
